HOSIERY ! ! !

Now everybody is interested, especially in our talk because we tell of such good qualities. We will have full value for our money. Let us offer you your money's worth. The secret of half the dissatisfied shopping lies in careless purchasing. You are not supposed to be a judge—we are. The careful scrupulous exercise of our knowledged fills the store with nothing we have got to blush for. People learn these things by experience and profit by its teachings.

Our hosiery business is steadily on the increase, it grows because we plant sterling qualities in the soil of economy. Only satisfaction can come from such a tilling of the commercial fields. We want you to buy here because you feel that you are doing best for yourselves. It only takes a little probing into the facts to prove it conclusively.

HAS HE BEEN MURDERED?

A Mystery Surrounding the Disappearance of Captain Egan at Chicago.

CHICAGO, May 17.—Has Captain Egan, of Cleveland, been murdered? His friends are anxiously asking and trying to definitely answer that question. He disappeared in Chicago under mysterious circumstances and while he was supposed to have been in possession of considerable money. Ten days ago he was sent here in company with Mr. Buemel to establish a Chicago shipping office of the National Lake Carriers association. This association was formed in Detroit April 28 by vessel owners for the purpose, it is said, of employing non union seamen and thus becoming independent of the powerful Seamen's union. For this reason Captain Egan's mission to Chicago was looked upon with anything but favor by members of the Seamen's union. He was making preparations to fit up an office in rooms 12 and 13 Lumbermen's Exchange, South Water and Franklin streets, when he suddenly disappeared last Tuesday and nothing has since been heard of him. He did not drink, so the theory of a spree is untenable. Captain S. B. De-Mass said that he met Captain Egan six days ago at Main street, near the stock yards, and that at that time he had over $500 in his pockets. "Captain Egan had told me before of threats made against him by union men," said Captain De Mass, "but he paid little attention to them. He was a courageous and powerful man and for that reason I believe that he was foully dealt with instead of getting scared and running away as some people say."

The fact of his disappearance was given to Chief of Police McClaughry and the detectives several days ago, with a description of the man. The police have had abundant time to work up on the case, and yet have failed to find the slightest clew to his whereabouts. He roomed next to Captain Biemel, on Cottage Grove avenue, near Fifty-Second street, and his clothing and effects remain in the room just as he left them the morning he was last seen. Egan makes his home in Cleveland, and has for years. The detectives have made due inquiry there and have found no trace. The officers say that it is certain that he has not returned home. From Cleveland it is learned Captain Egan had sailed for a number of years on the lakes and that for the last few seasons he had acted as walking delegate during strikes and troubles on the docks for the Cleveland Vessel Owners' association, which was in April merged into the National Lake Carriers' association, of which it was practically the founder. He has one son living in Cleveland. Secretary Elder, of the Seamens' union, disclaimed any knowledge regarding Egan's disappearance. Said he "Captain Egan's name has never been mentioned in any of our meetings, and not half of our men ever knew that he was here." Capt. R. R Smith some time ago attempted to establish a non-union vessel owners shipping office in Chicago, but he was several times brutally assaulted and three weeks ago he left town thoroughly frightened, but not before he had secured police protection from his boarding house to the depot, it is claimed. The Coast Seaman's Journal, in its issue of May 11, says that the organization of the National Lake Carriers' association was for the avowed purpose of crushing out the unions. With this as a text it calls upon all good union men to stand up for their rights.

AT ANN ARBOR.

Gov. McKinley Will Deliver an Address Tonight.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, May 17.—Governor McKinley and a number of distinguished Buckeyes left for Ann Arbor yesterday afternoon in the private car of Governor Ashley, of the Ann Arbor road. At the close of the national convention of republican students a banquet will be given, at which Governor McKinley will deliver an address to the students, tonight. Before leaving here McKinley said: "President Harrison will be the nominee of the Minneapolis convention, and there is no good reason to doubt his re-election."

TWO MEN SHOT

By a Mob of Union Strikers at North Escanaba, Mich.

ESCANABA, Mich., May 17.—Yesterday 150 union ore trimmers from this city went to North Escanaba and attacked the non-union men who were trimming a vessel at that place, with firearms. A lively skirmish ensued and bullets from both sides flew thick and fast for a few minutes. Clark Williams, a non-unionist, was shot in the leg and back and may die. Charles Hamilton was also hit by a bullet, but the wound will not probably prove fatal. After these men were shot the mob of union men fled. No arrests have been made.

FOR REVENGE.

Six Persons Shot From Ambush in Virginia.

BRISTOL, Tenn., May 17.—Word comes from Norton, Va., that Ira Mullins, a desperado of the Talton Hall stripe, who lived near the border, was shot from ambush and killed Saturday while crossing Round Gap. Revenge is the presumed motive as his money was not taken. His wife, brother-in-law, the driver and two others were also killed.

An Imprisoned Miner Rescued.

BUTTE, Mont., May 17.—Frank Agazza, one of the entombed miners of the Anaconda was rescued last night. He has been confined in a space four feet by two feet since Saturday at 3 o'clock, but escaped without injury. There are still five men under the great mass of rock, but no hope is entertained that any of them are alive.

THE REVOLUTIONISTS

Seem to Have Things Their Own Way in Venezuela—General Rodil Shot by His Troops.

MARACAIBO, Venezuela, May 17.—Confirmation of the capture of the city of Bolivar by the insurgents, and news of the death of the commander of the government forces has been received here. Besides the killing of General Rodil, General Espinoza was made prisoner at Bolivar. He was in command of the town while Rodil was away. The rebel chieftain, Gonzalez Gil, rode into Bolivar at the head of a column of cavalry and after a brief defense Espinoza surrendered Gil, fearing the return of Rodil with a strong force, retired with a large quantity of captured arms. On the second day after Gils' raid General Rodil re-entered the city with a large force. He was exasperated at the state of things in Bolivar and condemned a half dozen military officers, whom he thought responsible, to death. A few days later his troops revolted, took him prisoner and demanded immediate countermanding of the order to shoot certain of their comrades at sun set. Rodil refused to give the order and was shot. Gil returned and took possession of the town, the revolters joining his forces.

SCOTCHED BUT NOT KILLED.

The Saloon Interest Again in the Democratic Saddle.

EDITOR SENTINEL.

The causes which led to the defeat of most of the democratic nominees in the recent city election were so plain that he who ran might read. It was a revolt of the decent element of the democratic party against the arrogance of the saloon interest and the coterie of politicians for revenue only, lead by the editor of the Daily Journal.

These two influences have already well nigh shipwrecked the democratic party in local affairs. Not content with the mischief already done, they are again cracking the whip about the ears of the mayor, the city council and the better class of democratic voters. It was characteristic of them that they should assemble on the Sabbath to hatch their schemes for defeating an honest effort of a democratic mayor to take the police department of the city out of politics and run it in the interests of the taxpayers, rather than in the interests of pothouse politicians.

It will never cease to be a marvel to our citizens how some excellent members of the council as we have were so promptly whipped into the support of the scheme to humiliate Mayor Zollinger and to betray the interests of the people at the behests of the saloons.

Next spring the people will again be heard from. Mark my prediction.

PROGRESS.

FOR ASSISTING GARZA.

Several Hundred Mexicans Plead Guilty Yesterday.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, May 17.—The United States court room was crowded yesterday with 212 Mexicans, arrested upon indictments charging them with violating the United States neutrality laws in assisting Catarino Garza in conducting his revolutionary movement against Mexico upon this side of the border. The majority of the prisoners were penniless, and Judge Maxey appointed attorneys in their cases. The revolutionists were arranged and entered pleas of guilty, but sentence was reserved. Pablo Munoz and Zexto Longerio, two of the Garza lieutenants, were among the number. Captains John G. Bourke, Joseph Mackey and Francis H Sardie, all of the third cavalry, were present to testify in the cases. United States District Attorney Evans announced to Judge Maxey in open court that Catarino Garza would positively be in custody before the close of this term of court. The trials of the revolutionists will begin today.

IGNATUS DONELLY.

The Alliance Candidate Has Judgment Entered Against Him.

CHICAGO, May 17.—Ignatus Donnelly, alliance candidate for president and author of "the great cryptogram, or Francis Bacon's cypher in the so-called Shakespearean play" was defeated in Judge Blodgett's court yesterday in a suit with his publishers, R. S. Peale & Co., who had a contract for printing and circulating Mr. Donnelly's book. On the strength of anticipated large sales Mr. Donnelly, it is said, secured a loan of $4,000. The book was not the success that was expected and the result was that Peale & Co. claimed to be out $1,000. They began suit for the amount with interest, and yesterday Judge Blodgett entered judgment against Donnelly for $3,223.72.

Harry Henschen, a brakeman on the Pittsburg road, was crushed by the cars as he was trying to couple Sunday morning near Lima, Ohio. His injuries are crushing wounds of the breast and back. He is lying at his home, 153 Walton avenue.

A MIGHTY FLOOD.

The Father of Waters Surpasses All Previous Efforts in the Destruction of Property and Crops.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., May 17.—The Mississippi river at this city is higher today than at any time since the disastrous flood of 1858. The river continued to rise during the night, and at 5 o'clock this morning the gauge registered thirty-five feet five inches. At Alton, the water is above all previous records, except the high water of 1844. An idea of the effect of the flood on the railroads entering the city from the Illinois side of the river may be gained from the following description of the situation at East St. Louis, above the viaduct. The Ohio and Mississippi and Chicago, Burlington and Quincy tracks are from one to four feet under water. The Chicago and Alton road, for a distance of four miles from the bridge, is out of sight. Below the viaduct the Louisville and Nashville road was compelled to refuse freight last night. The Big Four will probably suspend today, and the Cairo short line will follow suit before evening. Not a wheel has moved in the Mobile and Ohio yards for several days. The belt line yards are three feet under water and the great bridge yards closed down last night. The Chicago and Alton, Big Four, Clover Leaf and Jacksonville route broke at the bridge junction near East St. Louis. There are but two engines with fire boxes above the water and they are pulling all passenger trains from the relay depot, upon the Wabash track to Venice and the Chicago and Alton road to a point beyond Nameoka. The Merchants terminal road at East St. Louis has suspended traffic between the bridge and the National stock yards. The flood in St. Charles county, twenty miles above the city, increases in vastness and in its disastrous results. All day yesterday and up to a late hour last night appeals for help were being received from numerous families whose homes are being swept away by the flood. The Post Dispatch, of this city, secured a large steamer and manned with a double crew for day and night duty, started Sunday morning to render aid to the hundreds of persons who are in immediate peril near the mouth of the Missouri river. Last night the Post Dispatch steamer rescued twelve families from Stups Slough and six families from Kitsaic island. The water had driven the people to the roofs of their houses and they had almost given up hopes of rescue when the steamer hove in sight. The current in the river was running at a tremendous rate of speed and the work of saving these families was accomplished with great difficulty. The steamer Fawn, from St. Charles, was carried by the fearful current from the regular channel of the river and was stranded in a wheat field an eight of a mile from the river proper. The Post Dispatch boat last night by means of long hawsers succeeded in getting the Fawn back into the channel.

A BRILLIANT WEDDING.

Count Herbert Bismarck is to be Married June 22.

VIENNA, May 17.—The marriage of Count Herbert Bismarck to the Count Gesse Hoyos, daughter of the Count George Hoyos, is likely to be one of the most brilliant seen in Vienna this season. The mother of Miss Hoyos was the daughter of Wrighthead, the well known torpedo maker, and there is a great deal of wealth in the family. The note of the German Kaiser thanking Count Herbert for an invitation to the wedding omitted. it is said, to convey the imperial congratulations, and this fact is a subject of some comment. Whether, however, the German Kaiser is represented or not on the occasion, the wedding on the 22d of June, will be attended by a great gathering of the leading nobility of Austria and Hungary, among whom the family of Hoyos stands very high.

AN IMPORTANT DEAL.

Messrs. Rockefeller and Morgan Purchase a Large Block of Stock.

PROVIDENCE R. I., May 17.—An important railroad deal was confirmed in this city last night. Mr. J. H. Ray, of Franklin, Mass., who controlled about 2,000 of the 2,800 shares of the stock of the Rhode Island and Massachusetts railroad, has sold out at something above par to Messrs. Rockefeller and Morgan, of New York. There were $100,000 worth of the stock in Rhode Island and $180,000 in Massachusetts. Mr. Rockefeller is a prominent director and stockholder of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad. The effect of this transaction will be disastrous to the New York and Northeastern road. The latter road now has a line between Franklin and Valley Falls, which is under a ninety-nine years lease to the Rhode Island and Massachusetts railroad.

National Art Congress.

WASHINGTON, May 17.—The first congress of the National Art association will begin today. Many of the most distinguished artists and art patrons of the country will be present. The chief object of the congress is to have the tariff removed from art. The meeting will be held in the hall of the Columbian university. The National Loan exhibit will be in the Smithsonian institution.

A Pioneer Citizen Dead.

PERU, Ind., May 17.—Colonel Isaac H. Lewis, a prominent citizen of this county, died yesterday of rheumatism of the heart. He was eighty-four years old and one of the first settlers of the county.

LOCAL LINES.

Dr. and Mrs. Charles Stultz have returned from a visit to Huntington.

A little girl aged about three years, lost from home, is being cared for at the jail.

Mrs. S. E. Morss, who was the guest of Mrs. V. B. Long, has returned to Indianapolis.

Miss Ethel Homsher, of Webster street, has recovered from an attack of diphtheria.

We are pleased to learn that the children of Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Fisher are improving.

Miss Margie Spencer, who is attending school at New York, will return home next Monday.

Squire James Wilkinson was able to be at his office today, the first time since his critical illness.

Mrs. Caroline P. Ferry, of West Washington street, who has been critically sick, is some better.

Miss Anna Kamp, who was called for the second time back to her bed on account of sickness is recovering.

The store of John Irv, at Andrews, was burglarized Sunday night. Goods to the value of $10 were taken.

The local camp, Sons of Veterans, has been invited to visit the camp at Pierceton, Ind., next Friday evening.

The report that Mrs. F. C. Critchley, of Lakeside, is down with diphtheria is untrue. The lady suffers with sore throat.

The City band concert will take place next Friday evening. It will be a great treat. Tickets can be reserved tomorrow evening.

James E. Graham and son have dissolved partnership. Mr. Graham, sr., will conduct the business, as before, at the same office.

Major C. D. Tillo, has received an elaborately engraved invitation to the dedication of the world's fair buildings, which occurs in October.

Argo A. Buck yesterday handed Mrs. Mensch the Equitable check for $1,000, being the amount of the policy held by her husband in that company.

Mrs. Agnes McKeag, of Fairfield avenue, who was recovering from a protracted illness, has suffered a relapse and her condition causes alarm.

John C. Nelligan, of West Lewis street, is very ill. Mr. Nelligan is eighty five years old, and has been a resident of this city for many years.

Mrs. Kate Isabel, of Kendallville; C. D. Emehiser, Brimfield; Harry Quinny and John Ditsenberglan, Fort Wayne, are new students at the International Business college.

Mrs. Dr. John Downs, nee Mary Randall, arrived today from Danbury, Conn. This evening Mrs. Downs will be the guest of honor at a tea to be given by Mrs. R. S. Robertson.

Will R. Emery has nearly recovered from the injuries received in a railway accident at Chicago some weeks ago. Mr. Emery was a member of THE SENTINEL'S editorial staff six years ago.

The Woman's Relief corps will hold a social and entertainment at Sion S. Bass hall Wednesday evening. A cordial invitation is extended to the citizens to participate with them on that occasion.

Mrs. W. C. Kruse and children, who have been visiting Rev. J. S. Antrim and wife for the past ten days, have gone to Ridgeville, their future home. Prof. Kruse is now acting president of Ridgeville college.

Misses Rose Ella and Madelaine Meegan, who have been attending Sacred Heart, after completing their studies there will attend Loselle university. Previous to going to the new school they will visit in Boston.

John H. Halferty, county assessor of Noble county, is in the city the guest of County Assessor Heath. Mr. Heath states that after comparing notes they find they are assessing property very nearly alike in the two counties.

The marriage announcement is made of William Goheen, a wealthy farmer of Lake township and Miss Lida Felger. The ceremony will take place soon. The groom elect is the republican nominee for county treasurer.

The state convention of the Daughters of Rebekah began in Odd Fellows hall, at Indianapolis, yesterday afternoon, with an attendance of one hundred or more. The reports of the officers of the order show that it has had a rapid growth the last year. The Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows met, and will be in session two days.

F. C. Robinson has sold to Sarah Davis, lot 2, Ewing's addition, for $750; Montgomery Hamilton to Harlow E. Barber, lot 257, Hamilton's Fourth addition, $1,150; Margaret Hamilton to Mary A. Scott, west half lot 245 Hamilton's Fourth addition, $800; C. F. Bond to John C. and Mary Wagner, lot 142, Northside addition, $600.

The eight-year-old son of Charles A. Miller, of 34 Scott avenue, South Wayne, was playing on West DeWald street yesterday afternoon with a number of his schoolmates, when a carriage drove along. The boys were playing tag in the street, and the Miller boy was running so swiftly that he was unable to prevent a collision with the carriage, although the driver used every precaution possible. The lad fell and the rear wheels passed over him. He suffers from the effect of a serious scalp wound and also a badly fractured ankle joint.

CITY BAND CONCERT.

Box office opens tomorrow morning at the Masonic Temple at 10 o'clock. Secure your seats.

CHAIRMAN CLARKSON

Talks About the Republican National Convention.

CHICAGO, May 17.—I. S. Clarkson, chairman of the republican national committee, was in town for a short time today, en route from Hot Springs to New York. He was somewhat sarcastic regarding the stories printed as to his hostility to President Harrison. "I have not looked at a newspaper nor touched a particle of correspondence for two months," said he in reply to a question, "and therefore I cannot have fixed up many schemes. The truth is I am going to Minneapolis to vote for some one, but I don't care to state for whom, I will vote. The seven millions of republicans who will be represented at Minneapolis have not made up their minds regarding their candidate. The result of the conventions held in various states clearly shows this. There will be more uninstructed delegates at Minneapolis than ever before in the history of the republican party. The northern states, the states which will elect the candidate of the convention, have almost every one of them sent uninstructed delegates. The majority of the instructed delegates come from the southern states. Some of the able editors and federal office holders," continued Mr. Clarkson, in a tone that showed some bitterness, "claim the nomination is settled already. They are entitled to their opinions, and I am entitled to mine." Mr. Clarkson said there would be several ballots, without doubt. He declined to pick the democratic nominee, but said that whoever he was he would be defeated. In closing the interview he again declared that he was not booming or opposing any one.

A VESSEL FOUNDERS

On the Caspian Sea With Two Hundred and Fifty Passengers Aboard.

LONDON, May 17.—Another frightful accident is said to have occurred on the Caspian sea. A report has been received from Astrahan that the steamer Alexander Walkow, carrying passengers between Caspian ports, has foundered with 250 passengers on board. This, following a recent accident attended by almost an equal loss of life a few weeks ago, has caused much excitement in Caspian ports, and there is a general opinion that the Russian authorities do not attend with due vigilance to the inspection of steamships in those waters. Most of the steamers of the Caspian are poorly built, and not calculated for enduring the sudden and severe storms which occasionally sweep over that inland sea. It is believed, that should this latest disaster and awful fatality be confirmed, it will lead to a general overhauling of the steam and sailing craft of the Caspian.

MURDERER TICE

Has No Fear of His Approaching Electrocution.

AUBURN, N. Y., May 17.—When murderer Tice arose this morning he greeted his guards cheerfully and without apparent thought that the summons to the death chamber might come during the day. The exact time when he will meet death is not known, but it is evident by the non arrival of witnesses that it will not be today. When questioned by his spiritual advisor as to how he would meet death, he said "I shall go calmly and I do no fear it. I am ready at any time." So far as he is concerned that is so. His spinal troubles, however, are likely to cause a break-down. This morning when he arose he staggered like a drunken man, and complained of cramps in his hands and legs. The chair in which Tice is to die is the one in which Kemler was killed, with a few changes. A much increased voltage will be used, and the alternating current.

A MINISTER

Accused of Dastardly Crimes in a Compartment Car.

LONDON, May 17.—At Hungerford, in Wiltshire, today Kennedy Bell, a minister of the established church, was brought up a prisoner, charged with criminal assault on two young women in the compartments of railway carriages. Bell has heretofore been a clergyman in good standing. He is married and has three children, and the charges against him have excited the greatest astonishment among those who have attended his ministrations. One of his victims is named Brittain, and the other is named Abery. The case is without a parallel in that Bell appears to have committed the two assaults in two different compartments during one journey on one train. The clergyman at first indignantly denied his guilt, but afterwards admitted having been too familiar with the girls, though he persisted in the denial of a criminal assault. At the hearing before the magistrates today sufficient proof was adduced to justify a remand, and Rev Bell was held without bail for future examination.

Broke His Neck.

NEW YORK, May 17.—Israel Rosenblatt, sixty five years of age, of Rochester, N. Y., while visiting at the home of his son in law in this city, last night fell down stairs and broke his neck. He died in a few minutes.

Are Willing to Serve.

WASHINGTON, May 17.—Justice Harlan and Senator Morgan have formally notified the president of their willingness to serve as arbitrators on behalf of the United States in the Behring Sea matter.

A Hero Dead.

CONSTANTINOPLE, May 17.—General Klapka is dead at Budapest. He was one of the heroes of the Hungarian revolution.

WE MAY GET IT.

The Base Ball Magnates Favor a Proposition to Admit Fort Wayne.

CHICAGO, May 17.—The Western base ball magnates have not yet disposed of the franchise of the St. Paul club. They received unsatisfactory offers this morning from Grand Rapids and Denver. Fort Wayne also sent a proposition, which is likely to be accepted unless one of the other towns should conclude to better its offer. The matter will be definitely settled this evening, and from the present outlook it is probable that Fort Wayne will get the prize.

IN THE COURTS.

Civil Cases Up for Hearing—Criminal Business Dull.

In the circuit court Judge O'Rourke found for the defendant in the case of Henry Schwartz vs. P. Cox et al.

Clark Bitner has been appointed guardian of the minor heirs of Adam Bitner, deceased.

E. J. Mercier has been appointed administrator of the estate of the late John W. Muldoon.

Walter Craig, Trevor Majors and Fred Hendricks were this morning sentenced to sixty days' imprisonment in the county jail for stealing brass from the Pennsylvania company.

There were three cases of intoxication before the mayor this morning. William Conway, a laborer, was arrested by Officer Murphy. Officer Trautman arrested Charles Wilson, a blind peddler, who was found in a beastly state of intoxication. Wilson presented a badly done-up appearance this morning. Theodore Johnstone, for being drunk and disorderly, was taken in tow by Officer Rnock. Among other articles that Johnstone had stowed about his clothing was a butcher knife about a foot long, which Clerk Kopp, of the police station, will use to intimidate reporters with. The three prisoners were sent to jail.

Warrants are out for the arrest of four young men for participating in a bloody fight at a dance in the east end Saturday evening. The young fellows have "skipped the town" and four vacancies in the Pittsburg car shop were filled this morning. The boys are good fellows and we refrain from publishing their names. Whisky was the cause of the trouble.

Hon. R. C. Bell is at Muncie today to perfect a change of venue in the case of Lackey vs. the Ames Bonding company.

DON'T MISS IT.

Splendid Treat at the Feeble Minded School This Evening.

A SENTINEL representative attended the play at the feeble minded school last evening and we can say that a rare treat is in store for all who go tonight. The lady teachers and all interested deserve great credit for the wonderful perseverence in drilling and preparing the children of this school for the entertainment. The exercises from beginning to end abounded in excellent merit. The "Brownies" were very funny in their play of "Cinderella." "Crowning the May Queen," a cantata, was beautifully rendered and the May pole dance was very pretty. "Hail dat Gospel Tug," sung by Louis and Edith Sanford, little colored brother and sister, was highly amusing. The dumb bell and tamborine drills, as well as the Indian club drill showed skillful accomplishment. Throughout the program was a very fine one and is sure to delight the audience this evening. The institution band, especially in their last selection entitled "Recollections of War," made a big hit and with the "Industry" tableau was a good winding up of the entertainment. The exercises begin at 7:30 o'clock this evening and a large crowd is expected.

Frank Greer, of the Pittsburg freight office, will have a new residence erected on his recently acquired property on East DeWald street. Architect Charles Kendrick is drawing the plans.

Mr. and Mrs. William Pranger, of 26 East Washington street, are entertaining one of the brightest little baby boys ever seen. Mr. Pranger is a tanner and is putting up sporting free to day.

One of Barnett & Powers' back teams made things lively near the Nickel Plate road yesterday afternoon. A freight train opportunely arrived and stopped the horses until the driver came up. No damage.

Mrs. Frank Miller, nee Miss Clara Beaver, left at noon today for Tennessee to join her husband, whose health would not permit a residence in this state. Mr. and Mrs. Miller will make their future home in the mountains, near Chattanooga.

The bicycle club of the city Y. M. C. A. will take a run this evening, the weather permitting, leaving the association building at 7:30 sharp. The run will probably be out on the Huntington road. This section of the club has twenty-one members.

The announcement will soon be made of the marriage of H. J. Stellhorn, the county commissioner, to Mrs. Minnie Anweiler, who for some time past has been his housekeeper. A grand wedding celebration will take place at Mr. Stellhorn's handsome residence, 168 West Creighton avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Stier, of East Lewis street, entertained a number of their friends last evening, the occasion being their sixteenth wedding anniversary. The party dance I the merry hours away to the music of the Darktown orchestra. A delicious lunch added to the pleasures of the evening.

While Dr. Kesler was driving his fine sorrel carriage horse yesterday, the animal ran a wire nail, head first, into its foot a distance of two inches. Michael Connors, of engine house No. 2, removed the nail after much difficulty. The wound bled freely, but it is hoped it may not result in permanent injury.

Last evening St. Joseph Benevolent society elected the following officers. George P. Gordon, president; Dan McKendry, vice president; Patrick Ryan, recording secretary; C. F. Graffe, treasurer; G. P. Gordon, P. Ryan and C. F. Graffe sick committee. Mr. Ryan has been recording secretary for the society for ten years.

John Shaller, the South Lafayette street barber, is at Lafayette, where he will this evening attend the wedding of Edward Ehrman and Miss Lizzie Dienhart. The bride and groom will arrive in this city tomorrow and be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Shaffer until they can arrange for housekeeping. Mr. Ehrman is the popular bookkeeper at the E. F. Clausemeier & Co. agricultural implement establishment.

Phoenix lodge No. 101, K. of P., had a grand session last night. The candidate initiated were Elijah Shafer, Ed Miller, better known as "Peg," John O. Brown and John Metcalf. John W. Vordermark was taken into membership by card, and William Hilker and H. G. Studer were reinstated. Eleven members of the recently organized lodge of Monroeville were present and, pared with admiration upon the excellent work done by the lodge. Grand Prelate James Watson of Winchester, Grand Master of Exchequer Grace, of Union City, Mr. Hurd, assistant prosecutor of Wayne county, Editor J. D. Allegar of the Monroeville Breeze and A. C. Parks, of Monroeville were among the distinguished guests.

NOT NON-PARTISAN.

Special Meeting of the Council—The Mayor's "Non-Partisan" Clause Stricken Out—Tonight's Meeting.

It will not be a "non-partisan" police commission.

That much has been established by the action of the democratic majority of the common council at a meeting of the committee of the whole held last evening. The republicans, not satisfied to let the mayor exercise his judgment, did not favor the appointment of a commission by him. The democratic side of the council objected to the "non-partisan" clause in the mayor's recommendation and obliterated it by passing the following resolution:

"Be it resolved, that the recommendation of the mayor in his message to the council, concerning the creation of a police commission consisting of members outside of city the council be and is hereby in all parts approved, except that the word "non partisan" be stricken out, and that we recommend the passage of an ordinance in conformity with this resolution."

Therefore at the special meeting of the council this evening an ordinance will be presented for the election of three democrats outside the council to constitute a board of police commissioners. Whether the mayor will be asked to recommend such men or remains to be seen. When a SENTINEL reporter today asked Mayor Zollinger if he had in view any good democrat for the place, he said:

"I will recommend [illegible] council will do as it pleases and [illegible] nothing to do with it whatever. [illegible] cratic members of the municipal [illegible] other cities have favored the non-[illegible] an idea of such governing body [illegible] that of the police commission, [illegible] seems strange that Fort Wayne [illegible] not. It would be better for the [illegible] ocracy of this City if the non-[illegible] plan was adopted in the manner [illegible] of the police department."

THE TAYLOR UNIVERSITY.

The Property To Be Sold—Plans for the Future.

At the Berry street M. E. [illegible] yesterday afternoon a meeting of board of trustees of Taylor university was held at which it was decided, owing to their inability to raise the indebtedness which has been hanging over the property, to dispose of it. The property will be sold on the following terms: Sealed bids must be accompanied by a certified check for $1,000, and no bid less than $25,000 will be considered; the sum being necessary to discharge in full the obligation of the board of trustees reserving the right to reject any or all bids. This step will be a great surprise to the majority of the citizens. It does not mean, however, that the university will be closed, but the board are endeavoring to get rid of the obstacle which has impeded the progress in the past that they may establish still greater results. The school has flourished beyond the best expectations of its friends under the supervision of Dr. Reade, and he will remain with the institution. It is hoped that by this action of the trustees every barrier to its progress may be removed.

DAUGHTERS OF REBEKAH.

The Eighth Annual Meeting of the Grand Lodge at Indianapolis.

The eighth annual meeting of the grand lodge of Daughters of Rebekah is in session in Odd Fellows' hall, in Indianapolis. The attendance is large, 340 delegates being present, with Mrs. J. T. Henderson, of Fort Wayne, presiding. Last night the delegates assembled at the hall to see Olive branch No. 13 exhibit degree work, and a large audience of probably 1,000 women was present. This morning the delegates visited the state house and there had their pictures taken, a motion to that effect having prevailed yesterday. Tomorrow the grand lodge of the Odd Fellows will begin their semi-annual meeting.

THE NON-PARTISAN POLICE COMMISSION.

In the language of the valiant soldier at the battle of Waterloo, "We have met the enemy and we are theirs," but the principle of non-partisanship police force in larger cities will not down, and we believe it is in the very near future when the good citizen, irrespective of party fealty, will most heartily assist with voice and vote the consummation of this much wished for result. The handwriting on the wall can be easily read. While it will not be fully settled until the regular meeting of the city council the action of the committee of the whole last evening and the meeting of the city democratic central committee on Sunday shows very plainly which way the wind is blowing. It bears no good tidings for the mayor's recommendation. We had hoped that our city council would rise above partisanship when the best interests of our city and our people were at stake. No one who has ever witnessed the workings of a non-partisan police board will question the wisdom of selecting such a commission and the benefits the community derives from the same. Take Indianapolis, for instance. When the police force was made an important part of the political machine, it was a disgrace to the community and state. It was rotten to the core. Crime, in its worst forms, flourished all over the city. But since it has been lifted above the plane of local politics into the atmosphere of the best interests of all, it has proved a blessing and benefit to the residents of our capital city. And we doubt if there is one who lives in Indianapolis who would sigh for the "flesh pots of Egypt," or a return to the old political bondage of shame and degradation. A non-partisan anything is never popular with politicians at the start. Like the Australian election law they could see in it the down throw of the walls of Babylon of their political power. But who now would exchange it, with its honest, pure motives and fair dealing to all, for the old plan which caused so much trouble, dishonesty and corruption. Try the non-partisan police commission for one year with three of the best men in our city on the board, and we believe the most rampant politician will be more than pleased with the result.

THE National Encampment Grand Army of the Republic, will meet this year at Washington City, D. C., and without doubt will be the largest and most numerously attended of any that has thus far been held since the close of the war, and most probably, owing to the steady answer of the last roll call by the veterans of the war of the rebellion, the largest that will ever again assemble in this country. The event will call to the national capital more people than anything that has occurred there since the grand review in May 1865. A circular from Department Commander Joseph B. Cheadle, of Indiana urges upon the members of the Grand Army of the Republic to make their arrangements as soon as possible.

THE SCARLET LETTER.

By NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE.

CHAPTER III.

THE INTERVIEW.

After her return to the prison, Hester Prynne was found to be in a state of nervous excitement that demanded constant watchfulness, lest she should perpetrate violence on herself, or do some half frenzied mischief to the poor babe. As night approached, it proving impossible to quell her insubordination by rebuke or threats of punishment, Master Brackett, the jailer, thought fit to introduce a physician. He described him as a man of skill in all Christian modes of physical science, and likewise familiar with whatever the savage people could teach in respect to medicinal herbs and roots that grew in the forest. To say the truth, there was much need of professional assistance, not merely for Hester herself, but still more urgently for the child; who, drawing its sustenance from the maternal bosom, seemed to have drank in with it all the turmoil, the anguish and despair which pervaded the mother's system. It now writhed in convulsions of pain, and was a forcible type, in its little frame, of the moral agony which Hester Prynne had borne throughout the day.

Closely following the jailer into the dismal apartment appeared that individual of singular aspect whose presence in the crowd had been of such deep interest to the wearer of the scarlet letter. He was lodged in the prison, not as suspected of any offense, but as the most convenient and suitable mode of disposing of him until the magistrates should have conferred with the Indian sagamores respecting his ransom. His name was announced as Roger Chillingworth. The jailer, after ushering him into the room, remained a moment, marveling at the comparative quiet that followed his entrance; for Hester Prynne had immediately become as still as death, although the child continued to moan.

"Prithee, friend, leave me alone with my patient," said the practitioner. "Trust me, good jailer, you shall briefly have peace in your house; and I promise you Mistress Prynne shall hereafter be more amenable to just authority than you may have found her heretofore."

"Nay, if your worship can accomplish that," answered Master Brackett, "I shall own you for a man of skill indeed! Verily, the woman hath been like a possessed one, and there lacks little that I should take in hand to drive satan out of her with stripes."

The stranger had entered the room with the characteristic quietude of the profession to which he announced himself as belonging. Nor did his demeanor change when the withdrawal of the prison keeper left him face to face with the woman, whose absorbed notice of him in the crowd had intimated so close a relation between himself and her. His first care was given to the child, whose cries, indeed, as she lay writhing on the trundlebed, made it of peremptory necessity to postpone all other business to the task of soothing her. He examined the infant carefully and then proceeded to unclasp a leathern case, which he took from beneath his dress. It appeared to contain medical preparations, one of which he mingled with a cup of water.

"My old studies in alchemy," observed he, "and my sojourn, for above a year past, among a people well versed in the kindly properties of simples have made a better physician of me than many that claim the medical degree. Here, woman! The child is yours, she is none of mine, neither will she recognize my voice or aspect as a father's. Administer this draft, therefore, with thine own hand."

Hester repelled the offered medicine, at the same time gazing with strongly marked apprehension into his face.

"Wouldst thou avenge thyself on the innocent babe?" whispered she.

"Foolish woman!" responded the physician, half coldly, half soothingly. "What should ail me, to harm this misbegotten and miserable babe? The medicine is potent for good; and were it my child—yea, mine own, as well as thine—I could do no better for it."

As she still hesitated, being, in fact, in no reasonable state of mind, he took the infant in his arms and himself administered the draft. It soon proved its efficacy and redeemed the leech's pledge. The moans of the little patient subsided, its convulsive tossings gradually ceased, and in a few moments, as is the custom of young children after relief from pain, it sank into a profound and dewy slumber. The physician, as he had a fair right to be termed, next bestowed his attention on the mother. With calm and intent scrutiny he felt her pulse, looked into her eyes—a gaze that made her heart shrink and shudder, because so familiar and yet so strange and cold—and finally, satisfied with his investigation, proceeded to mingle another draft.

"I know not Lethe nor Nepenthe," remarked he, "but I have learned many new secrets in the wilderness, and here is one of them—a recipe that an Indian taught me in requital of some lessons of my own that were as old as Paracelsus. Drink it! It may be less soothing than a sinless conscience. That I cannot give thee. But it will calm the swell and heaving of thy passion, like oil thrown on the waves of tempestuous sea."

He presented the cup to Hester, who received it with a slow, earnest look into his face—not precisely a look of fear, yet full of doubt and questioning as to what his purposes might be. She looked also at her slumbering child.

"I have thought of death," said she—"have wished for it—would even have prayed for it were it fit that such as I should pray for anything. Yet if death be in this cup I bid thee think again ere thou beholdest me quaff it. See! It is even now at my lips."

"Drink, then," replied he, still with the same cold composure. "Dost thou know me so little, Hester Prynne? Are my purposes wont to be so shallow? Even if I imagine a scheme of vengeance what could I do better for my object than to let thee live—than to give thee medicines against all harm and peril of life—so that this burning shame may still blaze upon thy bosom?" As he spoke he laid his long forefinger on the scarlet letter, which forthwith seemed to scorch into Hester's breast as if it had been red hot. He noticed her involuntary gesture and smiled. "Live, therefore, and bear about thy doom with thee, in the eyes of men and women—in the eyes of him whom thou didst call thy husband—in the eyes of yonder child! And that thou mayest live, take off this draft."

Without further expostulation or delay Hester Prynne drained the cup, and at the motion of the man of skill seated herself on the bed where the child was sleeping, while he drew the only chair which the room afforded and took his own seat beside her. She could not but tremble at these preparations, for she felt that—having now done all that humanity or principle or, if so it were, a refined cruelty, impelled him to do, for the relief of physical suffering—he was next to treat with her as the man whom she had most deeply and irreparably injured.

"Hester," said he, "I ask not wherefore nor how thou hast fallen into the pit or say, rather, thou hast ascended to the pedestal of infamy on which I found thee. The reason is not far to seek. It was my folly and thy weakness. I—a man of thought, the bookworm of great libraries, a man already in decay, having given my best years to feed the hungry dream of knowledge—what had I to do with youth and beauty like thine own? Misshapen from my birth hour, how could I delude myself with the idea that intellectual gifts might veil physical deformity in a young girl's fantasy? Men call me wise. If sages were ever wise in their own behoof I might have foreseen all this. I might have known that as I came out of the vast and dismal forest and entered this settlement of Christian men the very first object to meet my eyes would be thyself, Hester Prynne, standing up a statue of ignominy, before the people. Nay, from the moment when we came down the old church steps together, a married pair, I might have beheld the bale-fire of that scarlet letter blazing at the end of our path!"

"Thou knowest," said Hester—for, depressed as she was, she could not endure this last quiet stab at the token of her shame—"thou knowest that I was frank with thee. I felt no love, nor feigned any."

"True," replied he. "It was my folly! I have said it. But, up to that epoch of my life, I had lived in vain. The world had been so cheerless! My heart was a habitation large enough for many guests, but lonely and chill, and without a household fire. I longed to kindle one! It seemed not so wild a dream—old as I was, and somber as I was, and misshapen as I was—that the simple bliss, which is scattered far and wide for all mankind to gather up, might yet be mine. And so, Hester, I drew thee into my heart, into its innermost chamber, and sought to warm thee by the warmth which thy presence made there!"

"I have greatly wronged thee," murmured Hester.

"We have wronged each other," answered he. "Mine was the first wrong, when I betrayed thy budding youth into a false and unnatural relation with my decay. Therefore, as a man who has not thought and philosophized in vain, I seek no vengeance, plot no evil against thee. Between thee and me the scale hangs fairly balanced. But Hester, the man lives who has wronged us both! Who is he?"

"Ask me not!" replied Hester Prynne, looking firmly into his face. "That thou shalt never know!"

"Never, sayest thou?" rejoined he, with a smile of dark and self relying intelligence. "Never know him! Believe me, Hester, there are few things—whether in the outward world or, to a certain depth, in the invisible sphere of thought—few things hidden from the man who devotes himself earnestly and unreservedly to the solution of a mystery. Thou mayest cover up thy secret from the prying multitude. Thou mayest conceal it, too, from the ministers and magistrates, even as thou didst this day, when they sought to wrench the name out of thy heart and give thee a partner on thy pedestal. But, as for me, I come to the inquest with other senses than they possess. I shall seek this man, as I have sought truth in books; as I have sought gold in alchemy. There is a sympathy that will make me conscious of him. I shall see him tremble. I shall feel myself shudder, suddenly and unawares. Sooner or later, he must needs be mine!"

The eyes of the wrinkled scholar glowed so intensely upon her that Hester Prynne clasped her hands over her heart, dreading that he should read the secret there at once.

"Thou wilt not reveal his name? Not the less he is mine," resumed he, with a look of confidence, as if destiny were at one with him. "He bears no letter of infamy wrought into his garment as thou dost, but I shall read it on his heart. Yet fear not for him! Think not that I shall interfere with heaven's own method of retribution, or to my own loss, betray him to the gripe of human law. Neither do thou imagine that I shall contrive aught against his life, no, nor against his fame if, as I judge, he be a man of fair repute. Let him live! Let him hide himself in outward honor, if he may! Not the less he shall be mine!"

"Thy acts are like mercy," said Hester, bewildered and appalled. "But thy words interpret thee as a terror!"

"One thing thou that wast my wife, I would enjoin upon thee," continued the scholar. "Thou hast kept the secret of thy paramour. Keep, likewise, mine! There are none in this land that know me. Breathe not to any human soul that thou didst ever call me husband! Here, on this wild outskirt of the earth, I shall pitch my tent; for, elsewhere a wanderer and isolated from human interests, I find here a woman, a man, a child, among whom and myself there exist the closest ligaments. No matter whether of love or hate; no matter whether of right or wrong! Thou and thine, Hester Prynne, belong to me. My home is where thou art and where he is. But betray me not!"

"Wherefore dost thou desire it?" inquired Hester, shrinking, she hardly knew why, from this secret bond. "Why not announce thyself openly, and cast me off at once?"

"It may be," he replied, "because I will not encounter the dishonor that besmirches the husband of a faithless woman. It may be for other reasons. Enough, it is my purpose to live and die unknown. Let, therefore, thy husband be to the world as one already dead, and of whom no tidings shall ever come. Recognize me not by word, by sign, by look! Breathe not the secret, above all, to the man thou wottest of. Shouldst thou fail me in this, beware! His fame, his position, his life will be in my hands. Beware!"

"I will keep thy secret as I have his," said Hester.

"Swear it!" rejoined he.

And she took the oath.

"And now, Mistress Prynne," said old Roger Chillingworth, as he was hereafter to be named, "I leave thee alone; alone with thy infant and the scarlet letter! How is it, Hester? Doth thy sentence bind thee to wear the token in thy sleep? Art thou not afraid of nightmares and hideous dreams?"

"Why dost thou smile so at me?" inquired Hester, troubled at the expression of his eyes. "Art thou like the Black Man that haunts the forest round about us? Hast thou enticed me into a bond that will prove the ruin of my soul?"

"Not thy soul," he answered, with another smile. "No, not thine!"

CHAPTER IV.

HESTER AT HER NEEDLE.

Hester Prynne's term of confinement was now at an end. Her prison door was thrown open, [illegible] the sunshine, which, falling on all alike, seemed to her sick and morbid heart as if meant for no other purpose than to reveal the scarlet letter on her breast. Perhaps there was a more real torture in her first unattended footsteps from the threshold of the prison than even in the procession and spectacle that have been described, where she was made the common infamy at which all mankind was summoned to point its finger. Then she was supported by an unnatural tension of the nerves and by all the combative energy of her character, which enabled her to convert the scene into a kind of lurid triumph.

It was, moreover, a separate and insulated event, to occur but once in her lifetime, and to meet which, therefore, reckless of economy, she might call up the vital strength that would have sufficed for many quiet years. The very law that condemned her—a giant of stern features, but with vigor to support, as well as to annihilate, in his iron arm—had held her up through the terrible ordeal of her ignominy. But now, with this unattended walk from her prison door, began the daily custom, and she must either sustain and carry it forward by the ordinary resources of her nature, or sink beneath it. She could no longer borrow from the future to help her through the present grief. To-morrow would bring its own trial with it; so would the next day, and so would the next; each its own trial, and yet the very same that was now so unutterably grievous to be borne.

The days of the far-off future would toil onward, still with the same burden for her to take up and bear along with her, but never to fling down; for the accumulating days and added years would pile up their misery upon the heap of shame. Throughout them all, giving up her individuality, she would become the general symbol at which the preacher and moralist might point, and in which they might vivify and embody their images of woman's frailty and sinful passion. Thus the young and pure would be taught to look at her, with the scarlet letter flaming on her breast—at her, the child of honorable parents—at her, the mother of a babe that would hereafter be a woman—at her, who had once been innocent—as the figure, the body, the reality of sin. And over her grave the infamy that she must carry thither would be her only monument.

It may seem marvelous that with the world before her—kept by no restrictive clause of her condemnation within the limits of the Puritan settlement, so remote and so obscure—free to return to her birthplace or to any other European land, and there hide her character and identity under a new exterior, as completely as if emerging into another state of being, and having also the passes of the dark, inscrutable forest open to her, where the wildness of her nature might assimilate itself with a people whose customs and life were alien from the law that had condemned her—it may seem marvelous that this woman should still call that place her home, where, and where only, she must needs be the type of shame. But there is a fatality, a feeling so irresistible and inevitable that it has the force of doom, which almost invariably compels human beings to linger around and haunt, ghostlike, the spot where some great and marked event has given the color to their lifetime, and still the more irresistibly, the darker the tinge that saddens it.

Her sin, her ignominy, were the roots which she had struck into the soil. It was as if a new birth, with stronger assimilations than the first, had converted the forest land, still so uncongenial to every other pilgrim and wanderer, into Hester Prynne's wild and dreary but lifelong home. All other scenes of earth—even that village of rural England, where happy infancy and stainless maidenhood seemed yet to be in her mother's keeping, like garments put off long ago—were foreign to her in comparison. The chain that bound her here was of iron links and galling to her inmost soul, but could never be broken.

It might be, too—doubtless it was so, although she hid the secret from herself and grew pale whenever it struggled out of her heart, like a serpent from its hole—it might be that another feeling kept her within the scene and pathway that had been so fatal. There dwelt, there trod the feet of one with whom she deemed herself connected in a union that, unrecognized on earth, would bring them together before the bar of final judgment and make that their marriage altar for a joint futurity of endless retribution. Over and over again the tempter of souls had thrust this idea upon Hester's contemplation, and laughed at the passionate and desperate joy with which she seized and then strove to cast it from her. She barely looked the idea in the face and hastened to bar it in its dungeon. What she compelled herself to believe—what finally she reasoned upon as her motive for continuing a resident of New England—was half a truth and half a self delusion. Here, she said to herself, had been the scene of her guilt, and here should be the scene of her earthly punishment; and so, perchance, the torture of her daily shame would at length purge her soul and work out another purity than that which she had lost—more saintlike, because the result of martyrdom.

Hester Prynne therefore did not flee. On the outskirts of the town, within the verge of the peninsula, but not in close vicinity to any other habitation, there was a small thatched cottage. It had been built by an earlier settler and abandoned because the soil about it was too sterile for cultivation, while its comparative remoteness put it out of the sphere of that social activity which already marked the habits of the emigrants. It stood on the shore looking across a basin of the sea at the forest covered hills, toward the west. A clump of scrubby trees, such as alone grew on the peninsula, did not so much conceal the cottage from view, as seem to denote that here was some object which would fain have been, or at least ought to be, concealed. In this little, lonesome dwelling, with some slender means that she possessed, and by the license of the magistrates, who still kept an inquisitorial watch over her, Hester established herself with her infant child. A mystic shadow of suspicion immediately attached itself to the spot. Children, too young to comprehend wherefore this woman should be set out from the sphere of human charities, would creep nigh enough to behold her plying her needle at the cottage window, or standing in the doorway, or laboring in her little garden, or coming forth along the pathway that led townward; and, discerning the scarlet letter on her breast, would scamper off with a strange, contagious fear.

Lonely as was Hester's situation, and without a friend on earth who dared to show himself, she, however, incurred no risk of want. She possessed an art that sufficed, even in a land that afforded comparatively little scope for its exercise, to supply food for her thriving infant and herself. It was the art—then as now almost the only one within a woman's grasp—of needlework. She bore on her breast, in the curiously embroidered letter, a specimen of her delicate and imaginative skill, of which the dames of a court might gladly have availed themselves to add the richer and more spiritual adornment of human ingenuity to their fabrics of silk and gold. * * *

By degrees, nor very slowly, her handiwork became what would now be termed the fashion. Whether from commiseration for a woman of so miserable a destiny, or from the morbid curiosity that gives a fictitious value even to common or worthless things, or by whatever other intangible circumstance was then as now sufficient to bestow on some persons what others might seek in vain, or because Hester really filled a gap which must otherwise have remained vacant, it is certain that she had ready and fairly requited employment for as many hours as she saw fit to occupy with her needle. Vanity, it may be, chose to mortify itself by putting on for ceremonials of pomp and state the garments that had been wrought by her sinful hands. Her needlework was seen on the ruff of the governor, military men wore it on their scarfs, and the minister on his band; it decked the baby's little cap; it was shut up to be mildewed and molder away in the coffins of the dead. But it is not recorded that in a single instance was her skill called in to embroider the white veil which was to cover the pure blushes of a bride. The exception indicated the ever relentless rigor with which society frowned upon her sin.

Hester sought not to acquire anything beyond a subsistence of the plainest and most ascetic description for herself and a simple abundance for her child. Her own dress was of the coarsest materials and the most somber hue, with only that one ornament—the scarlet letter—which it was her doom to wear. The child's attire, on the other hand, was distinguished by a fanciful, or, we might rather say, a fantastic ingenuity, which served indeed to heighten the airy charm that early began to develop itself in the little girl, but which appeared to have also a deeper meaning. We may speak further of it hereafter. Except for that small expenditure in the decoration of her infant, Hester bestowed all her superfluous means in charity on wretches less miserable than herself, and who not unfrequently insulted the hand that fed them. Much of the time, which she might readily have applied to the better efforts of her art, she employed in making coarse garments for the poor.

It is probable that there was an idea of penance in this mode of occupation, and that she offered up a real sacrifice of enjoyment in devoting so many hours to such rude handiwork. She had in her nature a rich, voluptuous, oriental characteristic—a taste for the gorgeously beautiful, which save in the exquisite productions of her needle found nothing else in all the possibilities of her life to exercise itself upon. Women derive a pleasure, incomprehensible to the other sex, from the delicate toil of the needle. To Hester Prynne it might have been a mode of expressing, and therefore soothing, the passion of her life. Like all other joys, she rejected it as sin. This morbid meddling of conscience with an immaterial matter betokened, it is to be feared, no genuine and steadfast penitence, but something doubtful, something that might be deeply wrong, beneath. * * *

Her imagination was somewhat affected, and had she been of a softer moral and intellectual fiber would have been still more so by the strange and solitary anguish of her life. Walking to and fro, with those lonely footsteps, in the little world with which she was outwardly connected, it now and then appeared to Hester—if altogether fancy, it was nevertheless too potent to be resisted—she felt or fancied, then, that the scarlet letter had endowed her with a new sense. She shuddered to believe, yet could not help believing, that it gave her a sympathetic knowledge of the hidden sin in other hearts. She was terror stricken by the revelations that were thus made. What were they? Could they be other than the insidious whispers of the bad angel, who would fain have persuaded the struggling woman, as yet only half his victim, that the outward guise of purity was but a lie, and that, if truth were everywhere to be shown, a scarlet letter would blaze forth on many a bosom besides Hester Prynne's? Or must she receive those intimations, so obscure, yet so distinct, as truth?

In all her miserable experience there was nothing else so awful and so loathsome as this sense. It perplexed as well as shocked her by the irreverent inopportuneness of the occasions that brought it into vivid action. Sometimes the red infamy upon her breast would give a sympathetic throb, as she passed near a venerable minister or magistrate, the model of piety and justice, to whom that age of antique reverence looked up, as to a moral man in fellowship with angels. "What evil thing is at hand?" would Hester say to herself. Lifting her reluctant eyes, there would be nothing human within the scope of view save the form of this earthly saint! Again, a mystic sisterhood would contumaciously assert itself, as she met the sanctified frown of some matron, who, according to the rumor of all tongues, had kept cold snow within her bosom throughout life.

That unsunned snow in the matron's bosom and the burning shame on Hester Prynne's—what had the two in common? Or, once more, the electric thrill would give her warning—"Behold, Hester, here is a companion!"—and looking up she would detect the eyes of a young maiden glancing at the scarlet letter shyly and aside and quickly averted with a faint, chill crimson in her cheeks, as if her purity were somewhat sullied by that momentary glance. O fiend, whose talisman was that fatal symbol, wouldst thou leave nothing, whether in youth or age, for this poor sinner to revere? Such loss of faith is ever one of the saddest results of sin. Be it accepted as a proof that all was not corrupt in this poor victim of her own frailty and man's hard law that Hester Prynne yet struggled to believe that no fellow mortal was guilty like herself.

The vulgar, who in those dreary old times were always contributing a grotesque horror to what interested their imaginations, had a story about the scarlet letter which we might readily work up into a terrific legend. They averred that the symbol was not mere scarlet cloth tinged in an earthly dye pot, but was red hot with infernal fire, and could be seen glowing all alight whenever Hester Prynne walked abroad in the night time. And we must needs say it seared Hester's bosom so deeply that perhaps there was more truth in the rumor than our modern incredulity may be inclined to admit.

NOT FOR TWENTY YEARS

Has so Much Rain Fallen in the Vicinity of Columbus.

COLUMBUS, Ind., May 17.—Not in twenty years has this part of the state suffered so much from the continuous rains. There has not been within the last sixty days twenty four hours of settled weather. Rain has fallen in great quantities and all the streams are out of their banks and doing great damage to farms, aside from delaying the farmers in putting in their crops.

It Is Not What We Say.

But what Hood's Sarsaparilla does, that makes it sell, and has given it such a firm and lasting hold upon the confidence of the people. The voluntary statements of thousands of people prove beyond question that this preparation possesses wonderful power.

Hood's Pills cure Constipation by restoring the peristaltic action of the alimentary canal. They are the best family cathartic.

From a letter written by Mrs Ada E Hurd, of Groton, S. D., we quote: "Was taken with a bad cold, which settled on my lungs, cough set in and finally terminated in consumption. Four doctors gave me up, saying I could live but a short time I gave myself up to my Saviour, determined if I could not stay with my friends on earth, I would meet my absent ones above. My husband was advised to get Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds I gave it a trial, took in all, eight bottles; it has cured me, and thank God I am now a well and hearty woman. Trial bottles free at Dreier Bros Drug Store, regular size, 50c and $1.00.

Good Looks.

Good Looks are more than skin deep, depending upon a healthy condition of vital organs. If the Liver be inactive, you have a Bilious Look, if your stomach be disordered you have a Dyspeptic Look, and if your Kidneys be affected you have a Pinched Look. Secure good health and you will have good looks. Electric Bitters is the great alternative and Tonic, acts directly on these vital organs. Cures Pimples, Blotches, Boils and gives a good complexion. Sold at Dreier & Bro's Drug Store, 50c per bottle.

When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

There is no accounting for tastes. Asafedita is said to be a favorite article of diet with the Hindoos, who use it in all kinds of puddings.

Walk One Way, Look Another.

You often see persons doing it, and many a poor fellow has stumped his toes or cracked his shins falling over some object. You call them fools, but it may be their brains are bemuddled by a torpid liver. People suffering with Indigestion and Dyspepsia get confused the brain is inactive. You must wake up the liver by taking Simmons Liver Regulator, the cure for this disorder and for Biliousness and Sick Headache.

Ignorance has its vain imaginations or superstitions; genius really sees.

The Sworn Tormentors of the Indigestion.

What cared they for the groans of the victim as he lay stretched upon the rack? Yet people whose hearts are neither as hard as the nether mill stone, nor whose fortitude is excessive, often have no pity for themselves—voluntarily incur life long torture by neglect. Rheumatism, the most agonizing and obstinate of complaints is, perhaps, more frequently neglected in its incipiency than any other, the preliminary twinges being set down to the credit of "a cold in the bones" which will pass away of itself. Singular fatuity—fatal delusion. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is a potent safeguard against the terrible inroads of this insidious and dangerous malady—dangerous because of its proneness to attack the heart, the seat of life. Neuralgia is also effectually counteracted and relieved by the Bitters. Malaria, kidney complaints, debility, indigestion, biliousness, la grippe loss of appetite and the inability to sleep are among the complaints eradicable with this genial corrective.

The Best in the World.

Senator Henry C. Nelson, of New York, writes:

"On the 27th of February, 1883, I was taken with a violent pain in the region of the kidneys. I suffered such agony that I could hardly stand up. As soon as possible I applied two ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS, one over each kidney, and laid down. In an hour, to my surprise and delight, the pain had vanished and I was well. I wore the plasters for a day or two as a precaution, and then removed them. I have been using ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS in my family for the last ten years, and have always found them the quickest and best remedy for colds, strains and rheumatic affections. From my experience I believe they are the best plasters in the world."

ARCHBISHOP VAUGHAN.

Cardinal Manning's Successor at Westminster.

The Reverend Doctor Herbert Vaughan, the new archbishop of Westminster, is the eldest son of Lieutenant Colonel Vaughan, of Courtfield Herefford, and belongs to one of the oldest Catholic families He was born April 15, 1832, in Gloucester, and was educated at Stronghurst college, Lancashire, and in Rome He founded and was president of St Joseph's college at Mill Hill, Middlesex. He was one of of the band of priests who came to this country in 1871 to work among the negroes in the South In 1872 he was nominated bishop of Salford by the Pope

He is a thorough man of the world, of varied talents and brilliant intellect, proprietor of the London Tablet and the Dublin Review, the former said to be the best Catholic organ in the world It is thought that the Pope will create him cardinal at an early date

As he is so entirely opposed to home rule in Ireland, it is probable that he will never be so entirely in touch with the Irish in London as was his predecessor, Cardinal Manning

Hood's Sarsaparilla absolutely cures where other preparations fail It possesses medicinal merit peculiar to itself
